

Jimmy and Pat Go to China is the quirky story of a romp by two Australians through a fascinating country in the company of one of its former citizens. The trio, from three very different cultures, visit some of the grand sites of China, climb the Yellow Mountains and the Great Wall, attract the attention of the public and police, and feast along the way.

Jimmy Pike was a well-known Walmajarri artist from the Great Sandy Desert. Pat Lowe is a writer who migrated from England to Australia in 1972 and now lives in Broome. Zhou Xiaoping is a Chinese artist who has settled in Melbourne with his family. The three have known one another for many years.
